Golf Course Industry magazine's reader survey was conducted online polling its more than 30,000 readers. The survey asked superintendents a variety of questions on the reputations of companies in the industry they purchase products from to maintain their golf courses. The reader survey featured multiple choice questions which included random listings of industry vendors to prevent the same few companies from being consistently chosen simply because they were at the top of the lists.

"There are hundreds of companies competing for the attention of golf course superintendents today," said Pat Jones, publisher and editorial director of Golf Course Industry. "It's a tribute to Trojan Battery that they were among the Top 50 most admired and trusted suppliers in our business."

According to the magazine's feature story "... (The reader responses) don't define total market share or sales. What they do is give us an idea of which companies superintendents think are meaningful to the industry right now."
